

In 2015, the federal government pledged to “...negotiate a new Health Accord with provinces and territories, including a long-term agreement on funding.”

As of January 2017, no such negotiations have taken place.

Under the federal offer made to other provinces, Manitoba would receive $18 million less from the federal government in 2017/18,
and more than $1 billion less over the next ten years.

$18
million
would pay for:

2,084
home care clients

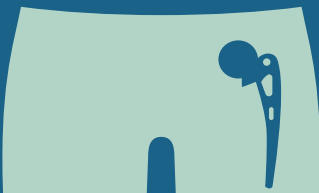

25,788
MRIs

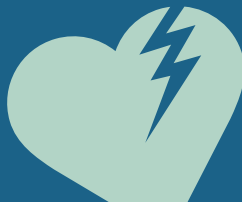

or

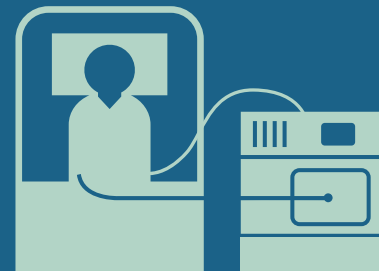

1,505
*unilateral
hip replacements*

2,591
hospitalizations for heart attacks

180 PEOPLE
on hemodialysis
